Appreciating Home Depot inventory is incredibly difficult, and any metric is viewed as part of a larger picture of Home Depot's overall performance. However, analysts tend to use some key metrics to measure the value of a stock. Home Depot's P/E ratio Home Depot's current share price divided with earnings per share (EPS) over a 12-month period gives a post-price/earnings ratio of approximately 23x. In other words, Home Depot trade around 23x with recent results. This is relatively low compared to, for example, the NASDAQ 100's 12-month P/E ratio at the end of 2019 (27.29). Low P/E ratio may mean investors pessimistic about the outlook for stocks or simply that they are undervalued. Home Depot's PEG ratio Home Depot's price/profit-growth ratio can be calculated by dividing its P/E ratio by growth – gives 2.2804. A low ratio can be interpreted as offering better value, while a higher ratio can be interpreted as meaning that stocks offer lower value. The PEG ratio provides a broader view than just a P/E ratio because it provides more information about Home Depot's future profitability. By calculating growth, it can also help you if you compare the share prices of several growth companies. Home Depot's EBITDA Home Depot's EBITDA (earnings before interest, taxes, aindations and a loss) is $21.9 billion. EBITDA measures The Home Depot's overall financial performance and is widely used to measure its profitability. Net sales TTM USD$125.6 billion EBITDA TTM 15.51% Gross profit TTM USD$37.6 billion Return on assets TTM 20.42% Return on equity TTM 5514.35% Profit margin 9.35% profit Margin 9.42% 94% Book value $1.427 Market value USD$288.3 billion TTM: after 12 months of Shorting The Home Depot shares Currently has 7.6 million Home Depot shares held short for investors – it is known as Home Depot's short-term interest rate. This figure is 9.1% more than last month's 7.0 million. There are a few different ways in which such an interest in shorting home depot shares can be assessed. Home Depot's Short Interest Rate Ratio (SIR) Home Depot's Short-Term Interest Rate (SIR) is currently the number of condensed Home Depot shares divided by the average number of shares in home depot traded daily (recently around 4.6 million). Home Depot's SIR is currently 1.65. In other words, there are currently approximately 1650 shares for every 100,000 Home Depot shares traded daily on the market. However, Home Depot's short-term interest rate can also be estimated on the basis of the total number of Home Depot shares or the total number of Home Depot shares receiving transactions (shares not held by insiders or large long-term shareholders – also known as float). In this case, Home Depot's short-term interest rate could be expressed as 0.01% of outstanding shares (for every 100,000 existing Home Depot shares, there are currently approximately 10 shares short) or 0.0071% of the shares available for sale (there are currently approximately 7 shares for each of the 100,000,000 remaining Home Depot shares). Such a low SIR usually points to optimistic prospects for a share price, and fewer people are currently willing to bet against Home Depot. Learn more about how to short-circuit Home Depot shares. Home Depot's environmental, social and administrative achievements Environmental, social and administrative criteria (known as ESG) are a set of three factors that measuring the sustainability and social impact of companies such as The Home Depot. When it comes to ESG scores, the lower is and lower scores tend to present a lower risk to investors. Home Depot's total ESG risk score of ESG: 14.87 Socially conscious investors use ESG scores to sift through how the ranking matches their worldview, and Home Depot's total score of 14.87 (such as 01/01/2019) is excellent – landing in the eighth percent of companies classified in the same sector. ESG points are increasingly used to assess the risk to the environment (carbon footprint, resource use, etc.), social (health and safety, human rights, etc.) and governance (fight against corruption, tax transparency, etc.). Home Depot's environmental score Environmental score: 6.14/100 The Home Depot's environmental score of 6.14 sets it directly in the 5th season for companies in the same sector. This could indicate that Home Depot is a leader in its field in terms of its environmental impact and is exposed to a lower level of risk. Home Depot's social score Social score: 8.66/100 The Home Depot's social score of 8.66 puts it directly in the same field of companies 5. This could suggest that Home Depot is in the leading sector in its field when it comes to its workforce and its impact communities. Home Depot's administrative score Administrative score: 5.07/100 Home Depot's administrative score sets it as the 5th day of 2016 for companies classified directly in the same sector. This could suggest that Home Depot is a leader in its field in terms of responsible management and strategy and is exposed to a lower level of risk. Home Depot's disputed score Dispute score: 2/5 ESG score also assesses potential disputes involving the company. The home depot scored two points out of 5 contests – the second highest possible score, reflecting the fact that Kotivarkko has largely managed to keep its nose clean. Home Depot, Inc. was last reviewed for ESG: 2019-01-01. Total ESG score 14.87 Total ESG percentage score 8.2 Environmental point percentage 5 Social score 8.66 Social point percentage 5 Administrative score 5.07 Administrative point percentage 5 Level of contention 2 41%Dividend distribution ratio: 40.71% of net profits Recently Home Depot has paid, approximately 40.71% of net profits as dividends on average. As a result, analysts have estimated annual earnings per share of 2.21 per cent of the current share value. This means that for more than a year Home Depot shareholders could receive a return of 2.21 % on their shares in the form of dividend payments based on recent payments (which unfortunately do not guarantee future payments). In the case of Home Depot, that would currently be equivalent to about $6 per share. While Home Depot's pay ratio may seem fairly constant, it's worth remembering that The Home Depot may invest much of its other net profit in future growth. Home the last dividend distribution was on 17 December 2020. The latest dividend was paid to all shareholders who purchased their shares by December 2, 2020 (ex-dividend date). Have Home Depot's shares ever been split? Home Depot's shares were distributed on 31 December 1999 on a 3:2 basis. If you had owned two shares the day before the issue, the next day you would have owned 3 shares. This would not have directly changed the total value of The Home Depot shares – only the number. Indirectly, however, a new share price of 33.3 % could have affected the market appetite of Home Depot's shares, which in turn could have affected Home Depot's share price. Home Depot stock price volatility Over the past 12 months, home depot shares are worth as little as $138.3077 to $291.0679. A popular way to measure stock volatility is its beta version. Hd.
